

The Card Huddle — Weekly Progress Report

Week ending Friday, May 29, 2026

Summary

This week focused on making the app simpler to navigate, cleaning up the feature set, and finishing the billing/subscription experience. The product is now easier for a new user to understand at a glance, and the paid-plan flow (upgrade, cancel, billing dates) is fully functional.

Highlights

Navigation & layout

- Streamlined the top navigation to 5 clear, intent-based tabs so users find what they need faster.
- Centered the navigation bar for a cleaner, more polished header.

Rainbow Mode & Collections (latest work)

- Gave "Rainbow Mode" its own dedicated tab. Users pick a product and a player, and the app shows that card alongside every parallel/variant — with the corresponding card image — so collectors can see and track a full "rainbow" in one place. Pricing and recent-sales features were carried over.
- Simplified Collections to a single, focused Browse experience, removing a confusing secondary mode. Less clutter, clearer purpose.

Billing & subscriptions (Stripe)

- Built the real subscription cancel flow through Stripe's secure customer portal — users can manage and cancel their own plans.
- Added billing transparency: Settings now shows the next billing date (or cancellation date) under the plan.
- Fixed a bug that could lock users out due to a stale configuration alert.

Plans & pricing

- Reworked the Free vs. Pro split into a cleaner "soft limit" model and retired three underused features (Flip Finder, Market Movers, Hot/Cold) to keep the product focused.
- Removed an unnecessary paywall on "Refresh Market Values" in the collection view.

Content & demos

- Browse Cards now seeds with live, real for-sale listings so the page feels active and useful immediately.
- Produced a feature-tour slide deck (brand colors + image placeholders) for sales/marketing use.

Status

All changes are committed. The navigation, pricing, and billing updates are merged; the Rainbow Mode and Collections simplification is complete and ready for review.

Next up (suggested)

- Review/QA the new Rainbow tab on mobile and desktop.
- Decide whether Rainbow should show all of a player's cards or just the base card.
- Continue polishing the upgrade/billing copy now that the flow is live.
